Alcohol Allergen Gluten-Free Declaration

Our supplier of alcohol routinely tests for gluten, and all samples submitted have fallen below the 10 ppm detection level. Our alcohol supplier is a world-class supplier of 190 and 200 proof alcohol (ethyl alcohol) produced by natural fermentation of all-grain materials.

The principal raw material for our alcohol products is corn or milo (grain sorghum). For the 190 and 200 proof alcohol that we use, a small amount of wheat starch is also processed with the corn or milo.

In the production of alcohol, the starch fraction of the grain is converted to fermentable sugar. The fermentable sugar is in turn converted to alcohol. Alcohol is further purified through distillations steps and does not contain the grain derivatives other than the alcohol. Proteins and other grain derivatives are separated elsewhere and used (in the manufacture of dried distiller's grain, which is sold as an animal food product) in the process.

Samples of the alcohol that we use have been tested for gluten content by the Food Allergy Research and Resource Program (FARRP) at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln, Nebraska. All samples submitted have fallen below the 10 ppm detection level.

In the January 23, 2007 Federal Register (Volume 72, Number 14), the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) issued a proposed rule to define "gluten-free" for voluntary use in the labeling of foods because no current FDA regulation specifically defines the term. The FDA proposed, among other things, that products must contain less than 20 parts per million (ppm) of gluten to bear the "gluten-free" claim.
